

Should we have reasonable limits on carbon pollution from power plants?

Or no limits at all?

Right now there are no limits at all on the largest source of carbon pollution. The Administration has proposed changing that, with a plan that even the utility American Electric Power says can reduce pollution “without a major impact to customers or the economy.” The Business Roundtable calls the proposals “a mix of commonsense steps we can all support.”

We hope everyone will join us in supporting these sensible agency actions to make our nation cleaner and healthier.

Unlimited pollution isn't good for any of us.

