

Nothing is 10¢ anymore. (Except saving the world.)

A cap on carbon pollution will help break America's addiction to oil and create jobs, while protecting the family budget. For example, based on Department of Energy estimates, it will only cost the average American household an extra ten cents a day on their utility bills.

We're headed for economic decline, environmental disaster, and much higher costs if Congress fails to act quickly. Instead, let's heed President Obama's call to overhaul our oil-dependent economy, protect our wallets, and boost clean energy. That's a bargain for America.
